

Method for Content Distribution in a Network Supporting a Security Protocol

Abstract of the Disclosure

The present invention is directed to a method of providing content distribution services while minimizing the processing time required for security protocols such as the Secure Sockets Layer.